Education Majors

Our licensure programs are unique in that we do not license at the bachelor's level, we license at the master's level. An undergraduate degree teaches students what to teach, and a master's degree teaches students how to teach. This design better prepares students to enter the school system as well as allows them to attain a master's degree in a short amount of time.

To move into a licensure program, students need to graduate with a bachelor's in the area they want to teach before applying to enter a licensure program. Licensure programs are between 12-18 months long, after which you are licensed in the state and only a few courses away from a master's degree.
